VETERINARY TECHNICIAN WEEK

Supporting local rescue animals while recognizing the profession that cares for them

Mercy University's Veterinary Technology Program is proud to support Paws Crossed Animal Rescue through a campus-wide pet supply drive. This effort recognizes the essential role veterinary technicians play in providing skilled, compassionate, and responsible care for animals in their time of need.

Through Mercy's spay/neuter clinical practicum lab, Veterinary Technology students and faculty directly help rescue animals by providing spay/neuter and vaccination services while building hands-on clinical experience.

This partnership strengthens the connection between Mercy University, Paws Crossed Animal Rescue, Dobbs Ferry, Elmsford, and the greater Westchester pet community.
